Who is Funding Black Lives Matter?

Last summer someone wrote “Black Lives Matter organizers hold the same values of America’s age-old enemies, who have always fought the ideals of our Constitution and our nation. That they have now taken on as their costume a false concern for Black America only adds to their depravity...” They also said the spate of recent cop killings is “guerilla urban warfare.”

Were these the words of an angry, White, unwashed Trump supporter? You know, the types the mainstream media had such sport with in the last election? Well, not quite – the writer here is Milwaukee County, Wisconsin Sheriff David Clarke writing in The Hill, a Washington, DC news outlet that covers Congress and the federal bureaucracy. Sheriff Clarke is an American patriot, not a race-obsessed race hustler. He doesn’t fit the PC narrative for Black leaders in America. As one wag put it, he “strayed from the liberal plantation.”

Clarke said “Americans watching the news of the murders of police officers in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, are observing a civil war unfold within our borders. A war between rule of law and anarchy-seeking hate.”

“It’s time to come to the aid of our police, our front-line soldiers, by calling this war, and not terrorism. Avoiding the truth through wordsmithing — the false narrative of the lone-wolf — is contemptible as more innocent officers perish while our politicians hem and haw. We as a people need to declare that we stand with rule of law, and not with the false tales of the revolutionary Marxist forces, who most recently have rebranded themselves from Occupy Wall Street to Black Lives Matter.”

Sheriff Clarke really called them out, accusing BLM of seeking revolution by targeting the rule of law — a dangerous game indeed.

These police shootings remind me of those instigated by Communist agitators in the bloody Algerian War (1954-1962). They started with seemingly random attacks, usually drive-by shootings of unsuspecting cops. The purpose was to terrorize, cause the police to over-react, and stir up more even more hatred. The spate of attacks on cops in the U.S., which could be in the early stages of coordination -- stoke anger and hatred. When combined with the unrelenting media attacks on Trump and leftist mobs rioting in the streets, we could be seeing the early warning signs of political instability.

Sheriff Clarke is to be commended for standing up and speaking truth to power about BLM. But wait, he wrote this back in July. Why raise the issue now?

Because 1) the police killings and continue; and 2) it has just now been publicly revealed that “The W.K. Kellogg Foundation, which maintains strong financial ties to the Kellogg Company, has provided at least $930,000 in support of the controversial work of the Black Lives Matter organization.” This a leading headline at Breitbart.com on December 1, 2016.

The article continues:

“According to the Foundation’s website, the purpose of the $900,000 grant was to:

“Enhance local and place-specific interventions to address issues impacting the lives of Black community members, families and children by building the infrastructure and capacity of the national #BlackLivesMatter to support and strengthen their local chapters’ organizing capacity.

“On June 1, 2015, the W.K. Kellogg Foundation provided $30,000 to the Praxis Project, Inc. to support, according to the charity’s website, “the inaugural BlackLivesMatter Chapter Retreat.”

$930K is a lot of money. Guess that is what inspired some average citizens out there to circulate a petition via #DumpKelloggs.

Why does a foundation closely tied to a Fortune 500 company support this stuff? That is the subject of another column. But think it the next time you go to the grocery store. Do you really want to support BLM -- Pringles, Pop-Tarts, Eggos, and other breakfast goodies?
